The Blogger's SEO Content System

The exact keyword-to-published-post workflow — for bloggers who want traffic, not just a calendar to fill in.

Quick-Start: How This System Works

Most blog planners are just a calendar with blank boxes. This isn't that. This is the actual workflow behind every post that ranks — research, outline, write, optimize, publish, repurpose — broken into four modules you run in order, every time you sit down to write.

THE CORE IDEA

A post fails for one of three reasons: nobody's searching for it, it doesn't answer the search intent, or it reads like it was rushed. This system has a module for each failure point.

What's inside (full system)

Module	Fixes
1. Find the Keyword	Picking topics nobody's searching for
2. Build the Outline	Posts that don't match what the reader wants
3. Write It Like a Human	Drafts that read as generic or AI-written
4. Optimize & Publish	Posts that go live and then go nowhere

Module 1 — Find the Keyword (sample)

The 3-question filter

Run every topic idea through these before you commit to it

1. Is someone actually searching for this? Type the topic into Google. If autocomplete suggests near-identical phrases, or "People also ask" shows up, there's real search volume.
2. Can I realistically rank for it? Look at the current top 5 results. If they're all major sites, pick a narrower angle. If they're small blogs or forums, it's winnable.
3. Does it lead somewhere? A good blog topic should connect to your product, email list, or next post.

THIS SAMPLE SHOWS THE 3-QUESTION FILTER ONLY

The full module also includes "Where to Find Long-Tail Topics" (5 concrete sources) and a full table of low-competition keyword patterns with real before/after examples.
